OPENING

The work session was called to order at 5:18 p.m. by vice chair Jason Jaeger at the Adel School in Adel, Oregon.

Mrs. Martin coordinated with Kelly from the stem labs to create a lesson similar to what the students would be learning that board members could work through to get a feel of what we would be purchasing. Board members paired up with staff to create a building. When groups were completed with the lesson we talked about pros and cons of the lesson (curriculum). Mr. Hiatt asked how much hands on it is. Head teacher Mrs. Martin explained that a lot of it is technology and kids have to create whatever it is that they are making via technology and then they can build it. The example she used was when you build a roller coaster you create it on a computer than build it. Mr. Stratton likes the career connection and the lessons are created and the teachers don't have to spend time on creating it. Amy Fortune said that it builds relevance for lifelong learning.

The work session was adjourned at 6:36 pm.
